

MORNING APPEAL

TUESDAY, JANUARY 23

L. P. Fisher, newspaper advertising agent, 21 Merchants' Exchange, San Francisco, is our authorized agent. This paper is kept on file in his office.

MORE VOLUME NEEDED.

The great trouble with the men who discuss the silver question and its bearings upon the financial prosperity of this country, is generally the utter failure of those people to understand the significance of money of ultimate redemption. It is common to hear people say: "There never was so much money in the country as there is to-day. The trouble is it is all concentrated in the great Eastern cities and there must be something done to change the present system and make that money available." They will not see that what they are talking about is not money at all, but merely, in its different forms, substitute for money, and the reason there is no use for it is because property, the prices of which are regulated by the amount of real money, is perpetually falling and the men dare not make investments. Some say that of course if we could have free silver coinage it would stimulate industries in the West exceedingly; that they understand that, but the good of the whole country is what statesmen and legislators have to look to. When it is explained to those men that they need silver more than we do, they will not see it. There seems to be instantly an abberation of their minds when they are told that it is not the amount of paper promises to pay that the Government has put out which represents money, but it is that which will pay debts of all forms and which does not rest on anything else but itself for redemption. It is that which regulates prices. The volume of such money is what gives the price of wheat and cotton and to the land out of which the wheat and cotton is grown. Hence all the money there is in the country is the piteable supply of gold money. The others are mere makeshifts, to use as a convenience, the same as a man uses a check on a bank. Could silver be monetized and be given that old attribute which was originally its own, in conjunction with gold money of ultimate redemption, then business would not only start up in the West but prices would advance in the East until those men who have the money hoarded up in the great cities, would be glad to change it for property, which promised to be worth more a year hence than is worth to-day.

When, as now, money gets to be worth so much more than property, necessarily these men who have the money will loan it on gilt-edged securities at almost no interest, or they will lock it up in the vaults of banks or safe-deposits rather than to trust it in business at all. That is the change which is required. The urgent necessity is to increase the volume, not of promises to pay, but of that material which any man can take to any place in the country and with it pay his debts. When that comes there will be a transformation. So long as the bondholders and the bankers of the East control the financial policy of the country, so long will there be stagnation, congestion and infinite loss in the country; just so long the best laborers in the country will work without reward. That those cannot see that it would be for their benefit, as much more than for the benefit of the poor as what they possess is worth more than what the poor possess, is the strangest mystery of the age. The truth is the edict comes from the Rothschilds beyond the sea and the small bankers on this side simply echo the cry and will not use their own brains to judge whether what they are advocating is good sense or not.—Salt Lake Tribune.

How it Stands.

The Republican party stands up for gold and silver money and paper as good as either.—Republican Exchange.

Yes, you bet! Stands 13 for and 113 against silver in the House, and 8 for and 24 against in the Senate. Oh, what a "stander up!"—Populist Exchange.

The Examiner fills up three columns explaining how Evans wasn't caught. It could have been done in three words, namely, "Never touched him."
